Bions

In the darkest mists of time, millenias before the Sassium Empire was forged from the ruined battle field of the War of the Galaxies, in the void between galaxies a massive bio-ship was hurtling towards the Milky-way galaxy. Its mission: the total and utter destruction of any races that dare to oppose the mighty Dark God. By the time the Sassium Empire was formed, the bio-ship had entered the outer rim. Soon the emperor began to receive many reports of ruined planets. Yet there had once been life on these worlds. It went into the Reference Files and little more was done about it.

At 2 - 13 - 753 P.T. the Empire met this new, terrifying enemy around the desert world of Wenhor. Out of a force numbering in the hundreds, only 12 survived. This unknown enemy was named Bions. The single bion scientists have gotten have told many things. First of all their DNA is to precise to be anything natural. In the 750 years scientists have been studying them every one has almost exactly the same genetic structure. Secondly, the bions have an amazing talent for co-ordinating their attacks. Their minds seem to be linked somehow. The only other known animal that has this capability is the Rinda, an animal native to Mastek.
